
PubMed Central Link: https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC6132649/

In 150-200 words, briefly summarize the article’s premise. Additionally, in 400-450 words, offer a reply to the article.

Guidelines:

As a reminder, a good summary will only include the most important details. The summary should not read like a list of logically disconnected facts.

A good reply will either

(i) Defend the article’s premise

Or

(ii) Question the problems presented.

Regardless of whether you decide to defend or question, be charitable. Being charitable involves making the view or argument you critique as plausible as possible.

A useful resource for writing your short assignment is Jim Pryor’s guide to writing a philosophy paper: http://www.jimpryor.net/teaching/guidelines/writing.html